Matt Dowling Announces Candidacy for Republican State Committee

UNIONTOWN, PA — Former Pennsylvania State Representative Matt Dowling today announced that he is running for Republican State Committee, pledging to bring experience, unity, and a renewed focus on winning elections to the party's grassroots leadership.

Dowling, who represented Fayette and Somerset Counties for three terms in the Pennsylvania House of Representatives, said his decision is rooted in a desire to strengthen the Republican Party from the inside out.

"The Republican Party wins when it is organized, disciplined, and focused on shared values," Dowling said. "I'm running for State Committee to help build a stronger party infrastructure, support our candidates, and make sure Republicans are positioned to win elections at every level."

During his time in the legislature, Dowling built a reputation as a principled conservative and effective advocate for his district. He served as Chairman of the Pennsylvania House Second Amendment Caucus, fought for election integrity reforms, defended small businesses during the COVID shutdowns, and consistently earned high ratings from conservative and pro-business organizations.

Dowling emphasized that the role of State Committee is not about ideology alone, but about execution.

"This position is about organization, turnout, and unity," he said. "It's about giving our candidates the tools they need to win and ensuring that our party speaks clearly and confidently to voters across Fayette County and the Commonwealth."

A lifelong resident of Uniontown, Dowling is a graduate of Waynesburg University and Uniontown Area High School. He is a father of two sons and has long been active in community service, including Rotary and local nonprofit efforts.

Supporters say Dowling's experience as a former legislator, campaign strategist, and party leader uniquely qualifies him for the role. "Matt understands how campaigns are won," a campaign spokesperson said. "He knows what candidates need, he knows how party organizations function, and he knows how to bring people together."

Dowling's campaign for Republican State Committee will focus on strengthening local committees, supporting conservative candidates, and rebuilding trust and effectiveness within the party structure.
